

JD GREEN

Throughout my life, I have lost many things and many loved ones due to Bipolar disorder. I came to terms with it eventually and turned my life around. The struggle is constant and sometimes seems to be too much. Art, and its various communities, have been something that I turn to and they bring me peace and strength.

Until approximately three years ago, I absolutely did not consider myself artistic in any way. I started creating personal signs, furniture, and art from reclaimed wood and screws. People took to my pieces and I have been creating ever since. I am now slowly working towards larger murals and commercial pieces.
